The Scout 800 was the model designation for Scouts produced from late 1965 to mid-1971. They were manufactured with more creature comforts and had a fixed windshield, fancier bucket seats, and windshield wipers located at the bottom of the windshield. They came with an optional 196 4-cylinder or 232 Inline-6 engine. The models produced in 1967 came with a 266 V-8, and the 1969 models had a 304 ...

1970 International Harvester Scout International Harvester started making trucks way back in 1907. After WWII the only 4 wheels style recreational vehicle was the Jeep based off military vehicles and the public's reception to this style of truck was unknown. By the time the early 60s rolled around it was clear there was a market for these vehicles so International developed the Scout. The ...
